

ROCK SOLID

BELFAST BRICK framed by Belfast brick. The flick up of the Lyric Theatre's fly tower at the end of this Belfast street hints at the drop-off beyond, towards the River Lagan and the parkland winding alongside. The massing of O'Donnell and Tuomey's design has something of the heroic sixties about it with its three brick volumes of theatre, studio and rehearsal space, the circulation spaces running around them.

The practice describes the ensemble as 'standing on the sloping ground of the site like rocks in a stream'. EY
